Asset management strategy

The markets rose sharply in October, with European equities up 5% after the consolidation of September. Although some macroeconomic data lost momentum at high levels (PMI, Chinese GDP, etc.), the ECB confirmed its pragmatic stance, keeping refinancing rates low (0%!), with a EUR 1,800 billion purchase programme until March 2022.

The earnings season is proving very positive. Companies are benefiting from good operating leverage and the start of price increases which, in many cases, have offset inflation in raw material and transport costs. Margins are at historic highs in many sectors.

The ACT4 Positive Economy fund gained +4.8% in the month, outperforming its benchmark, up 4.7%. The main driver of performance was stock selection.

Amid rising energy prices and the low start of the COP 26 meetings, the utilities sector, up more than 7%, massively outperformed the market; technology benefited from very good publications (semiconductors) and a relative drop in the value style, while consumer discretionary and financials were bolstered by positive results. Telecoms fell into the red however (-3.5%) and industrial stocks and basic materials consolidated on the back of the Chinese slowdown.

The fund's main contributions came from industrial stocks (tied to the decarbonisation of the fund through recycling and waste recovery) such as Tomra systems (+23%), Biffa (+12.5%), Aker Carbon Capture, whose figures confirmed a faster pace of activity, or Pyrum Innovation (+11.4%) in tyre recycling, whose patented Pyrolyse technology made it possible to reduce CO2 emissions by 98% (compared to traditional incineration approaches) thanks to used tyre recovery. In technology, "enabler" companies which provide solutions to support the energy transition (such as SAP and Infinéon) were also positive contributors. In healthcare, Novo Nordisk continued to report strong prescription figures for Ozempic (diabetes) and the start-up of Wegovy, with pre-announced sales growth figures and annual guidance up at the end of the month.

Our underweight position in financials contributed negatively.

The main operations were to reduce our position in Philips due to its SRI rating. We continued to strengthen the innovative solutions provider segment by participating in the IPO of Waga Energy. Waga Energy has developed a breakthrough technology for landfill gas recovery called WAGABOX®. Installed on landfill sites, WAGABOX® units purify the biogas produced by the degradation of waste materials.
