Asset management strategy

The positive market trend continued in May, with the index gaining 2.7%, bringing its year-to-date gains to 12%. Value outperformed growth amid a sector rotation. Monthly performance was once again driven by consumer discretionary (luxury goods, automotive manufacturers) and banking, while sectors sensitive to interest rates, such as technology, utilities and telecoms, fell further than the market.

Uncertainty as to whether rising inflation expectations might trigger a monetary policy tightening dispelled optimistic complacency on markets and heightened volatility. Economies began to come out of hibernation, supporting cyclical sectors like consumer goods and leisure.

The OFI RS ACT4 Positive Economy portfolio underperformed the Stoxx Europe 600 NDR, gaining 0.30% in the month, compared with a 2.59% rise in the benchmark.

Positive performance was driven by positions in financials with a social inclusion theme (access to financial products), namely Intesa Sanpaolo and BNP. In energy, leading biofuel producer Neste Oyj gained 6.9%. The share benefited indirectly from economies coming out of lockdown: the company buys non-fossil organic materials like used cooking oil. Healthcare was also positive for performance, with AstraZeneca perking up and Novo Nordisk reporting stronger than expected sales and operating profit, buoyed by international business. Rybelsus is expected to achieve blockbuster status, with sales set to exceed $1 billion in 2021. Novo is a high-conviction investment and remains a growth stock boosted by a portfolio of treatments for diabetes and other chronic conditions (e.g. obesity).

The main negative contributors were poorly performing stocks in materials such as Renewcell, Carbios and FermentaG, all of which posted strong results. Carbios and FermentaG raised capital of €114 million and €13 million respectively, giving them improved visibility on cash flow out to 2023. L'Oréal and Michelin Ventures participated in line with their respective stakes in Carbios.

The other significant negative contributors were renewable energy stocks like wind turbine manufacturer Siemens Gamesa; its 67% shareholder Siemens Energy, which might increase its stake, also lost ground in the month. Orsted, which operates mainly offshore wind farms, performed in line with expectations. The company is set to announce its growth ambitions at an investor day in June. The sector has been suffering on fears of more modest growth and rising yields. This latter point is, in our opinion, more justified: with Europe's climate-related ambition to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 55% from here 2030 and achieve carbon neutrality by 2050.
